Nanaimo Child Development Centre

COVID-19 Update July 6, 2020

At the current time, the Nanaimo Child Development Centre will be providing access to the building by appointment only.

While the majority of services continue to be provided virtually, a limited number of in-person (non-virtual) appointments will now also be available on a priority basis as we move towards a gradual and safe re-opening of our building. In-person sessions will be offered to clients based on a comprehensive strategy to determine priority assessment, Centre capacity and clinical judgement. Enhanced safety measures will be in place for all in-person visits at the Centre and in the community – these include pre-visit screening questions, enhanced hand hygiene and cleaning protocols, physical adaptations to our office space, social distancing (unless services require close contact), and the use of personal protective equipment (PPE) when social distancing cannot be maintained.

For new families seeking our services, we continue to accept referrals, complete new intakes and work through our ongoing waitlist.

For any general enquiries during this time, please email info@nanaimocdc.com.

Once again, we would like to thank everyone for their patience during this challenging time. Our team at NCDC is dedicated to the families of our community and committed to providing excellent and caring support whether the services provided are in-person or virtual.
